Tokyo Tech's Participation in Cooperative Education through Research Internships

Tokyo Tech will participate in Cooperative Education through Research Internships, a newly introduced scheme by the Japanese government, companies, and universities. Tokyo Tech students in the doctoral degree program may participate in a trial of the internship scheme from the AY 2021 fall semester.

In Cooperative Education through Research Internships, doctoral students engage in research activities at companies for two months or longer, after reading through job descriptions and going through the process of matching themselves with companies. Participating students will receive a salary and also acquire credits. However, as the AY 2021 fall semester is a trial period, students may not acquire credits from internships and only direct employment is available during the semester.

For details, please refer to the documents issued by the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology (only a Japanese version is currently available). In addition, you can attend an online briefing as detailed below.

We will notify you of the guidelines for Tokyo Tech students as soon as the Ministry releases the necessary information on this matter.
